Online Ambassador Overview & Application

Not sure how to blog?
Don’t worry if this is new to you, we’ll teach you the ropes. The first step will be learning how to use the Wordpress blogging platform. It’s really easy. We’ll provide full support during your online ambassadorship.

What should you blog about?
We want your insights on what your unique journey as a Florida Tech student is like. What are you learning in your online classes that interests you? Are you working in addition to being a student? How does what you are learning in class apply to your real-world business experience?

Who’s your audience?
Prospective and current students, alumni, and the entire Florida Tech community.

What does your audience want to read about?
They want to know what it’s really like to be a Florida Tech student. Talk about the professors, classes, and experiences that make your Florida Tech journey memorable. Talk about what you are learning in classes. Ultimately this is your blog, so the direction is up to you. Keep in mind that Florida Tech is sponsoring your blog and expects a certain level of maturity and relevancy.

What makes great content?
- Writing about topics you are passionate about
- Injecting your personality, we aren’t looking for a press release
- Embedding images and video help your audience visualize your message
- Social shareability. Do you think your friends would share your post?
- Consistency. Choose your direction and stick to it
- Keep it short, 300-700 words is all you really need
- Use bullet points and headers to make it easy to read

How do I keep up with it?
- Blog when the mood strikes. If the creative juices are flowing, keep on going
- Keep an idea list
- Let your ideas incubate
- Come back later if you get stuck

Where will my content be seen?
In addition to the blog, expect your content to be shared throughout social media. Florida Tech encourages you to share your blog posts on your personal Facebook and Twitter. Your content might also be used in other Florida Tech publications. We want you to become a social media rockstar!
